ABOUT CONFERENCE

The demand for higher Nursing education and excellent nursing practice has increased worldwide and the response has been an impressive expansion of educational offerings both within and across the countries. Despite international differences in nursing education and practice, a number of mechanisms allow nurses to migrate throughout the world. There are ranges of issues relating to the nurse workforce, nursing education and nursing practice locally to globally. To have a global stand its best time to understand where are we? And where we have to reach professionally?

Nursing practice in the 21st century faces a number of challenges including a growing population of hospitalized patients who are older and more acutely ill, increasing healthcare costs and the need to stay current with rapid advances in medical knowledge and technology. To address these challenges, employers will seek nurses who have knowledge, skills and attitudes that are aligned with the requirements of their practice environments, who can work effectively in inter-professional teams across of variety of healthcare settings, and can provide traditional nursing services as well as other needed services such as research and leadership, case management, health promotion, and disease prevention. To keep pace with the rapidly changing healthcare environment, nurse educators must continuously evaluate and revise education curricula, approaches and programs used to educate new and practicing nurses.

The purpose of this international conference is to emphasize the necessity of common educational standards for nurses in a globalized world. Various sessions of the conference describes globalization and the internationalization of nursing education and nursing practice.

OBJECTIVES OF CONFERENCE

- Discuss the local view of nursing education to foster professional identity.
- Enhance higher order thinking and communication in nursing education to meet global standards of professional nursing.
