:: ABOUT THE SEMINAR

“Emerging Trends in Neurological Disorders”

Neuroscience is a rigorous interdisciplinary study of the nervous system. It integrates the function of molecules, cells and networks as they give rise to fully formed behavioural and cognitive processes. Mental and neurological disorders are highly prevalent worldwide and has been seriously underestimated by traditional epidemiological methods that took into consideration only mortality, but not disability rates. The proportionate share of the total global burden of disease due to neuropsychiatric disorders is projected to rise to 14.7% by 2020. There is paucity of information regarding resources for the treatment and management of neurological disorders. In order to decrease this information gap, this seminar was aimed to the area of neurology from preclinical to clinical realms. The seminar will focus on prevention, diagnosis, treatment and current approaches in neurological disorders that are important from the view of public health and quality of life.
